This Week in Wabash

Hello, Wabash,

Happy Monday. I hope your week is off to a great start. We are now in the part of the year I like to call, “hot winter.” This is because I’m ready for the next season to start, but we’re still in the depths of the most extreme temperatures of the year. It’s just as difficult to enjoy the out-of-doors as it is in January, but on the complete opposite end of the seasonal spectrum. It wasn’t all bad, though. My family did get a chance to explore a new park this weekend, but we had to cut our visit short due to the heat. Here’s hoping the temperatures will begin falling soon.

In last week’s newsletter, I told you about two preview stories I wrote about bands that had been headed to the Honeywell Center two weeks ago. Those were ARRIVAL From Sweden and Thunderstruck, tribute acts for ABBA and AC/DC, respectively.

This week, I wanted to call your attention to two more such preview stories which appeared in last Wednesday’s paper.

The first was The Karens, which is a combination of comedians Karen Morgan and Karen Mills. I appreciated that they had a good sense of humor about the emergence of the term “Karen” in our culture. It sounded like it was going to be a great show last Thursday at the Eagles Theatre.

The second was Jim Breuer. I was looking forward to this interview because I've been watching him on TV and in movies since I was in junior high school. I went back and looked at the episodes from the three years he was a cast member of “Saturday Night Live” from 1995 to 1998 and I was surprised about how many I remembered. I was somewhat nervous to interview him, though, because he's been outspoken on several hot-button issues, not the least of which was COVID-19 vaccine mandates. (Breuer canceled several dates across the country last year at venues that required vaccinations.) He was very straightforward and upfront with his views, though, and it ended up being a really good interview.

I hope you had a chance to read these stories and check out the shows. I have one more upcoming Honeywell show to write about this week, the rock band Great White. I think it's going to be a good story, as well.

Well, that's all I have for you today. I hope you have a great rest of your week.

Best,
Rob
